To help you in this effort, we asked three experts from the insurance industry to share their views on which kind of life insurance policy is best for you. Life Insurance: What Is the Best Kind for Me? Understanding which kind of life insurance policy is best for you can be complicated. If you're looking for an affordable insurance policy, a small insurance policy may be right for you. Small policies are inexpensive and are available in a wide variety of options. These options usually consist of Whole Life policies and Universal Life policies. Whole Life and Universal Life policies are available in two categories: Called guaranteed minimum payment (GMP) or policy guarantee, these policies ensure that the amount of your death benefit is guaranteed for life or the number of years specified in the policy. An example would be a $5,000 death benefit, guaranteed for life. In other words, you will not lose any amount of your death benefit or the number of years. Keep in mind that if you do not need the policy to pay for your funeral expenses, you should consider purchasing a policy with a term. These policies will pay out an annual benefit for a specified period of time, such as 20 or 30 years. To take advantage of the tax benefits of an insurance policy, purchase a term policy, since the tax benefits will apply for the years the policy is in force. Get The Best Insurance Policy for You To help you determine which kind of life insurance policy is best for you, we asked three insurance experts to share their views with you. -- Insurance Expert: Richard Joseph, JD., LL.M.
